Credit Union of Colorado Foundation raises more than $150,000 in 2013
Variety of community organizations benefit from more than $125,000 in grants

The Credit Union of Colorado Foundation reports it raised more than $150,000 and made more than $125,000 in grants to community organizations statewide in 2013, its second year in operation.

The foundation granted money to a wide range of causes, including victims of Colorado floods, wildfire relief, college scholarships, Habitat for Humanity and Boys and Girls Club of America.

According to Doug Schneider, chairman of the foundation, more than 3,000 individuals contributed funds to the foundation.

“We are grateful we were able to help so many communities around the state this past year. We look forward to another strong year in 2014,” said Schneider.
